

AIG, Aruba kicks off the New Year with a “Meet and Greet”

Last Saturday night, Prakash Gupta, Director of the American Home Assurance Company and his wife Niti welcomed their various brokers and many of their top clients for a gala “Meet and Greet” in the ballroom of the Marriott Resort and Stellaris Casino. The discreetly elegant affair provided a delightful way to begin 2007 as Prakash took the time to give a brief history of the company and express his gratitude to certain of his loyal and able employees.

American Home became part of AIG, Aruba (American International Group) ten years ago, representing AIG in Aruba along with ALICO, the life insurance branch of the company. Prakash explained that AIG, which has offices in 100 countries around the world, has existed in Aruba for sixty-seven years, serving the community. During Saturday evening’s gala, the first of such events for American Home, he also took the opportunity to contribute to the welfare of the community by presenting a donation to Ron Serrat of the YMCA. Prakash, who is active in the Kiwanis Club of Aruba, declared admiration for their many worthwhile programs for the youth and the homeless and the commitment their volunteers to a better community.

Prakash also took that moment to offer kudos to three of his employees for exemplary service beginning with Grace Tjin-Tham-Sjin, Manager of Personal Lines. He also singled out Claims Manager James Yee and Controller Charise Hodgeson for admirable contributions to the company.

It was a lovely evening for all that attended, understated, and elegant, with a beautiful buffet from the Marriott culinary department. Attendees enjoyed an evening of dining and business talk, finishing with dancing to the music of the Dushi Band; a great way to begin the year!
